Boyfriend and girlfriend are at the mall

C2

On the way out to the car she gets caught looking at Another guy

C3

He gets jealous & starts arguing. He asks her "What the Hell you looking at!" She tells him "I wasn't looking at him babe," He's getting closer and shes pushing him away

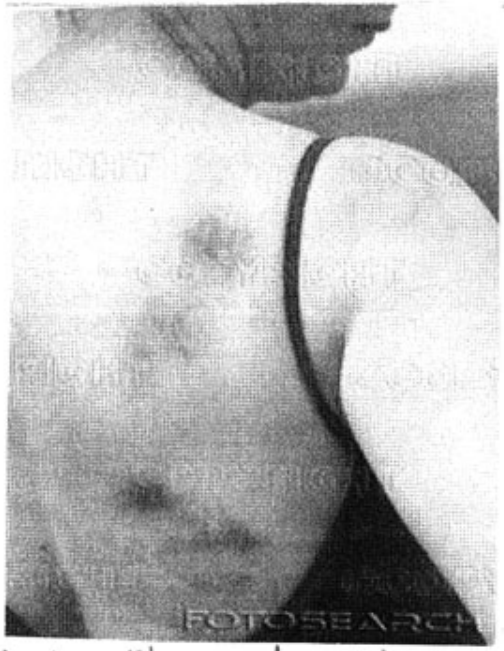
C4

As they approach the car things heat up he's loosing his tempure

C5

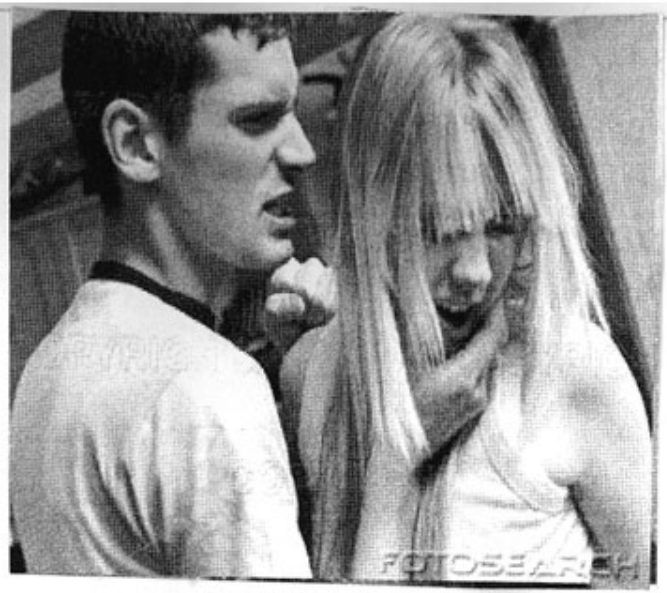
When they get in the car voices get raised his face is getting red he clinches his fist. She keeps apologizing with a scared look in her face.

C6



"I'm sorry babe, Please don't!" she screams. cau the last time this happend he left her with bruised ribs.

C7



He raises his hand and slaps her across the face and yells "Shut up!"

C8

She bawls out in tears on the ride home, knowing she guna call him tonight apologizing

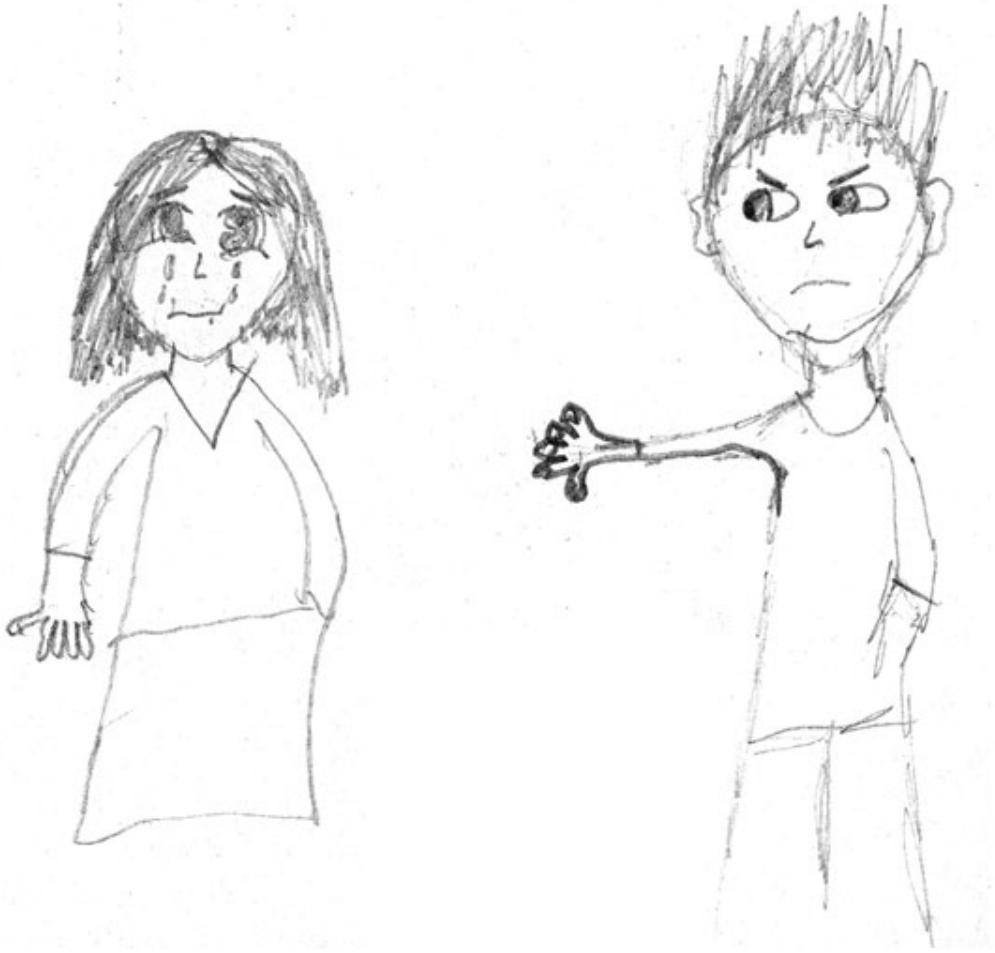
She thought everything was going to be perfect. He was funny, out going, sweet, and caring.

But everything went down hill. She felt bad just hanging out. It could happen verbally, emotionally, or even physical abuse. Verbal and emotional abuse are never okay.



(He is calling her vile names)

Studies show that at least one in five teens will be in an abusive relationship.

Even though abuse is common, it is never okay. Everyone deserves respect. Support is available, you are not totally wrong.
